

News

2.10.17

Morgan Sindall success at Construction Manager of the Year Awards

Congratulations to three of our construction managers who have been announced as winners at The Chartered Institute of Building's Construction Manager of the Year Awards 2017.

Six of our construction managers were finalists with three taking home a coveted award. Karen Fairhurst and James Kidgell, both project managers, won gold in the school's categories for St Hilda's High School, Liverpool and Moreland Primary School, London respectively. Tom Booth, project manager, took home a silver award for the London Academy project in Edgware.

Held at the prestigious Grosvenor House Hotel on Park Lane, London and hosted by BBC presenter, Steph McGovern the awards celebrate exceptional individuals who are destined to be the industry leaders of tomorrow.

Congratulations also to project managers, Mark McElwee and Neil Dunbar and senior site manager Patrick Johnson who were all shortlisted for the awards.

If you'd like to find out more, visit the Construction Manager of the Year Awards website.